

Compound Indirect Objects

Some sentences have two indirect objects.

Example: The teacher gave Laura and Sean a pass to the library.

In the example the direct object is pass. The indirect objects are Laura and Sean. They are connected by the conjunction and. These two indirect objects are called compound indirect objects.

Write in the blanks below the indirect objects for the sentences.

1. Lacy gave Fido and Spot some water.

2. Mother wrote my sister and me a note for school.

3. The bank loaned Mr. Dobbs and Mrs. Garcia money for the store.

4. Calvin made the children a kite and a toy boat.

5. Jill passed Susan and Mike the potatoes.

6. The cowboy sang the herd a lullaby.

7. Kevin cooked Lee and his sister soup and rice.

8. The lady bought her daughter and son tickets.

Compound Indirect Objects

Some sentences have two indirect objects.

Example: The teacher gave Laura and Sean a pass to the library.

In the example the direct object is pass. The indirect objects are Laura and Sean. They are connected by the conjunction and. These two indirect objects are called compound indirect objects.

Write in the blanks below the indirect objects for the sentences.

1. Lacy gave Fido and Spot some water.

● Fido and Spot _____

2. Mother wrote my sister and me a note for school.

● sister and me _____

3. The bank loaned Mr. Dobbs and Mrs. Garcia money for the store.

● Mr. Dobbs and Mrs. Garcia _____

4. Calvin made the children a kite and a toy boat.

● children _____

5. Jill passed Susan and Mike the potatoes.

● Susan and Mike _____

6. The cowboy sang the herd a lullaby.

● herd _____

7. Kevin cooked Lee and his sister soup and rice.

● Lee and sister _____

8. The lady bought her daughter and son tickets.

● daughter and son _____