No, in this case we are not talking about whether or not you are telling the truth. The question is: when you stretch out on your bed, do you lie or do you lay? The answer is: it depends when you are doing it.

Yes, this one is a little trickier than most. Read about the differences (and similarities) between lie and lay:

- Lay: to lay means to place an object or objects down somewhere. Lay is the correct present tense form of the verb. Laid is the correct past tense form of the verb. This verb to lay always includes an item that is being put or placed.

  The geese each lay three eggs per day.
  Yesterday, the geese laid four eggs.

- Lie: to lie means to recline your body. Lie is the correct present tense form of the verb. However, lay is the correct past tense form of the verb. That's right, lay. It's no wonder it gets confused with the verb above, since the past form is the same as that verb's present form.

  I need to go lie on my bed.
  Last night I lay on my bed, unable to sleep.

Choose “lie,” “lay,” or “laid” to complete each sentence.

1. Before I went to bed, I _________ (lie, lay, laid) my clothes out for tomorrow.
2. Every afternoon, we _________ (lie, lay, laid) on the bed for a nap.
3. When they’re cold, they _________ (lie, lay, laid) a blanket on their legs.
4. All of last week I _________ (lie, lay, laid) in bed feeling sick.
5. Our pet dogs like to _________ (lie, lay, laid) under the table.
6. Yesterday, the boys _________ (lie, lay, laid) their backpacks outside.
7. While we meet, they _________ (lie, lay, laid) their purses on the couch.
8. Susanna and Maribel often _________ (lie, lay, laid) on the floor to make posters.
9. Last night we all _________ (lie, lay, laid) awake until midnight.
10. Yesterday, our teacher _________ (lie, lay, laid) on the ground, injured.
Name: _________________________

---

Misused Verbs: Lie/Lay

No, in this case we are not talking about whether or not you are telling the truth. The question is: when you stretch out on your bed, do you lie, or do you lay? The answer is: it depends when you are doing it.

Yes, this one is a little trickier than most. Read about the differences (and similarities) between lie and lay:

Lay: to lay means to place an object or objects down somewhere. Lay is the correct present tense form of the verb. Laid is the correct past tense form of the verb. This verb to lay always includes an item that is being put or placed.

The geese each lay three eggs per day.
Yesterday, the geese laid four eggs.

Lie: to lie means to recline your body. Lie is the correct present tense form of the verb. However, lay is the correct past tense form of the verb. That's right, lay. It's no wonder it gets confused with the verb above, since the past form is the same as that verb's present form.

I need to go lie on my bed.
Last night I lay on my bed, unable to sleep.

Choose “lie,” “lay,” or “laid” to complete each sentence.

1. Before I went to bed, I __________ (lie, lay, laid) my clothes out for tomorrow.
2. Every afternoon, we __________ (lie, lay, laid) on the bed for a nap.
3. When they're cold, they __________ (lie, lay, laid) a blanket on their legs.
4. All of last week I __________ (lie, lay, laid) in bed feeling sick.
5. Our pet dogs like to __________ (lie, lay, laid) under the table.
6. Yesterday, the boys __________ (lie, lay, laid) their backpacks outside.
7. While we meet, they __________ (lie, lay, laid) their purses on the couch.
8. Susanna and Maribel often __________ (lie, lay, laid) on the floor to make posters.
9. Last night we all __________ (lie, lay, laid) awake until midnight.
10. Yesterday, our teacher __________ (lie, lay, laid) on the ground, injured.