

Sentence Diagramming: Intensive Pronouns

A intensive pronoun is a pronoun ending in -self or -selves that is used for emphasis in a sentence but has no other function. It can be removed from the sentence without changing the meaning. In sentence diagramming the intensive pronoun is put in parentheses after the noun it refers to.

Example: I myself like mysteries.

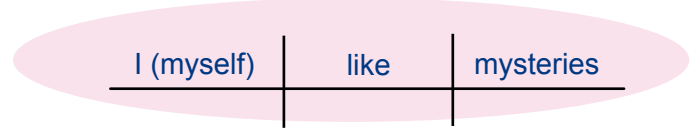

Diagram the following sentences.

1. The governor himself spoke at our graduation.
2. She will do it herself.
3. Did you make it yourself?
4. The children built the treehouse themselves.
5. I washed the car for the principal herself.

Sentence Diagramming: Intensive Pronouns

A intensive pronoun is a pronoun ending in -self or -selves that is used for emphasis in a sentence but has no other function. It can be removed from the sentence without changing the meaning. In sentence diagramming the intensive pronoun is put in parentheses after the noun it refers to.

Example: I myself like mysteries.

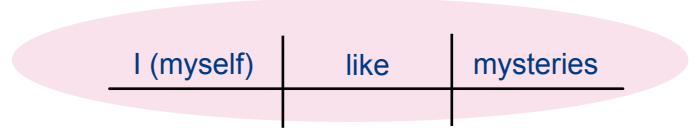

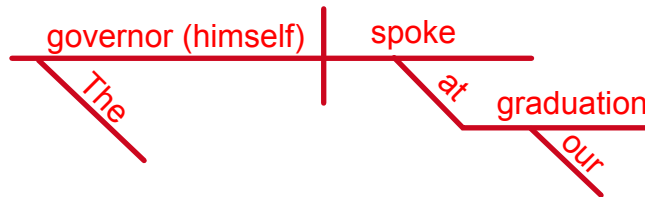

Diagram the following sentences.

1. The governor himself spoke at our graduation.

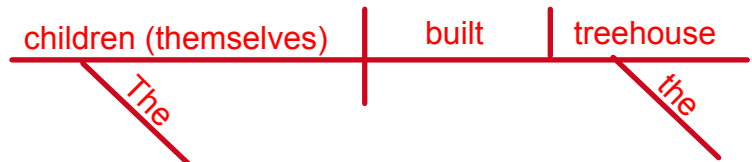

2. She will do it herself.

3. Did you make it yourself?

4. The children built the treehouse themselves.

5. I washed the car for the principal herself.

